

HERD ON THE STREETS

Have you heard about the Herd?

In honor of the Republican National Convention, dozens of fiberglass elephants can be seen throughout the Tampa Bay area, many of them inside Tampa International Airport and the Tampa Convention Center, a major gathering point for GOP activities later this month.

The 2012 Tampa Bay Host Committee and the Outdoor Arts Foundation are partners in the Herd About Tampa Bay project, in which dozens of artistically decorated 4- by 4-foot elephants will be on display.

Herd About Tampa Bay is "a unique and creative way to involve our community and display the tremendous talents of our local artists," host committee president and chief executive Ken Jones said.

The showcase continues throughout August.

"We're doing this simply because we feel it's a wonderful project, and it directly serves our mission of helping to beautify the Tampa Bay area with creative artistic endeavors," said Outdoor Arts Foundation executive director Jay Goulde.

Patrons paid $2,000 each for the cost of production, installation, artists' fees and expenses. Once the exhibition ends, they may keep the elephants or donate them to a favorite charity.
